FOR CONTEMPORARY ARTS

Dear Friends of the Bemis Center,

At the Bemis Center for Contemporary Arts, clarity of mission is one of our core strengths. We exist to support artists, fostering creativity in its purest form. This purposeful generosity infuses the entire organization.

It is also one of the main reasons we have experienced unprecedented growth over the past year. When many other non-profits were retreating inward, reluctant to take risks in the face of uncertainty, we have been expanding. Working towards this common goal, Bemis Center staff, the board of directors, members and sponsors have had the foresight to identify opportunities and the agility to capitalize on them.

This momentum, a direct result of last year's Building Bemis capital campaign, has allowed us to expand our programming and cement our reputation as a leader in the growing field of artist communities. We are currently on track to receive over 1400 residency applications this year, double what we had just a few years ago. We have received recognition and support from the National Endowment for the Arts, calling our new Community Arts Residencies "imaginative and innovative." And our exhibitions program has been making actual rainbows in the sky.

Organizations like the Bemis Center for Contemporary Arts have aesthetic and cultural benefits, but I believe the implications of our success extend beyond the arts. The energy generated by our programs and projects have become a catalyst for the community's creativity as a whole. Even as we've expanded, I'm proud to say that our fundamental values remain unchanged — we've remained steadfast in our commitment to artists. If you believe that exceptional talent deserves to be supported, I invite you to join us in accomplishing our mission.

Mark Masuoka
Executive Director/CEO

[ARTIST-IN-RESIDENCE]

2011 marked 30 years of the Bemis Center's support of exceptional talent. Since 1981, we've given over 600 artists the gift of time, space and support. Three months of uninterrupted work time, large live/work studios, and generous monthly stipends combine to create an ideal environment for risk-taking, experimentation and creative growth. The program is extremely competitive, with a record 1190 applicants in 2011. To accommodate increasing demand, last year we renovated the 10,000 square foot Okada Sculpture Facility and added five new live/work studios, increasing our capacity by 50%. This $2.6 million capital campaign has allowed us give the institution over to more artists than ever before.

[COMMUNITY ARTS]

The Community Arts program ignites civic engagement by bringing together artists and public organizations, to engage a range of contemporary issues. 2011 marked the pilot year of Community Arts Residencies, an innovative partnership with social services organization Heartland Family Service, benefiting both artists and the public through mutually constructive, two-way engagement. As cuts to art education continued in 2011, projects like the Fertile Ground educational curriculum have filled a vital need for teachers across a spectrum of educational disciplines. Community Arts also oversaw an exciting new model for public/private art commissions in 2011, developing a facility-wide master plan for Project Harmony's new headquarters.

[EXHIBITIONS]

Bemis Center and UNDERGROUND exhibition spaces span 15,000 square feet of flexible space that feature curated exhibitions, events and commissions with established and emerging international, regional and local artists. 2011 was a pivotal year — we presented Vera Mercer's first ever solo exhibition in the United States, commissioned Keith Jacobshagen's landmark A Golden Year, completed renovations throughout our first floor and entry dock, and housed a dynamic and raffish series of UNDERGROUND exhibitions. Throughout these projects, artists and their work transformed the Bemis Center's physical space, rethought the organization's cultural context and expanded the scope of contemporary art presentation in our city.

2011 was a banner year for the Bemis Center Art Sales program, as transformative as it was successful. Not only did sales nearly double, we launched a new art management program that has proven invaluable for serious collectors. Art sales and art management work hand-in-hand to offer top-notch professional services in the growth and management of private and corporate collections. Much of our sales inventory comes from local, national and international artists who have chosen to back up their belief in the Bemis Center with generous donations. The sales of this work are reinvested back into the organization — a self-sustaining cycle of artists supporting artists.
